

Content

1	Introduction	5
2	Seeking Medical Treatment Abroad	6
2.1	Existing Bodies of Literature	6
2.2	Criteria for the Definition of Case Studies	10
3	Cross-border Medical Practices: Cases from Europe	10
3.1	Transcending European Borders in the Field of Health Care	10
3.1.1	Towards a Europeanization in the field of health care (regulation)	10
3.1.2	Cross-border provision of health care	12
3.1.3	Criteria for selecting sites of cross-border cooperation in health care	13
3.1.4	Examples of cross-border medical initiatives	14
3.2	Cross-border Organization of Organ Donations	18
3.2.1	Conditions and contexts of cross-border organ transplantation and trade	18
3.2.2	Systematizing the field of organ transplantation: terminology and procedures	19
3.2.3	Regulating organ transplants in the Eurotransplant region	21
3.2.4	Loopholes and inconsistencies within the regulatory regimes of organ transplantation	24
3.2.5	Researching organ-related transplants, trade, and travel: methodological consequences from past studies	24
3.3	Aspects of Researching Border-transcending Medical Practices	27
3.3.1	Regulation and subversion	27
3.3.2	The role of technology	27
3.3.3	Information flows	28
3.3.4	Sites of negotiation	28
3.3.5	Aspects of discursivity	28
3.3.6	The relationship between dynamic and stability	28
4	Interpreting Spatial Dimensions of Cross-border Medical Practices	29
4.1	Introductory Notes on the Role of Space as being Constitutive of and Constituted through the Social	29
4.2	Conceptualizing Cross-border Medical Practices	30
4.2.1	Subjects, practices, and assemblage	30
4.2.2	Consequences for addressing spatialization	32
4.3	Elaboration of the Role of Spatiality	33
5	Consequences	38